

The Director of Central Intelligence

ICS 4283-89

The Honorable Richard B. Cheney
The Secretary of Defense
Washington, D.C. 20301

Dear Mr. Secretary:

I am pleased to forward for your information the enclosed copy of the National Foreign Intelligence Strategy, which I recently approved. The first Strategy was produced by Director of Central Intelligence Casey in January 1986. This was followed by an update prepared by Acting Director Gates about a year later. It covered goals and objectives intended to implement the Strategy's findings. Both documents have served as a basis for Intelligence Community planning since their publication. Changes on the world scene since 1986, as well as the passage of time, prompted me to review the Strategy and its update earlier this year. That review has led to this new edition. [redacted]

One of the changes in this Strategy is a greater emphasis on priorities--for both substantive intelligence problems and functional aspects of the intelligence process. The present budget climate makes such an emphasis imperative. In the Strategy, I have sought to supply a clear understanding of the areas that should be kept foremost as the Intelligence Community considers the choices posed by growing requirements and resource limitations. The Strategy is not a stand-alone document. Its judgments are elaborated and refined in the many documents that contribute to the Intelligence Community's planning process. It does, however, set forth basic guidance on the directions I believe intelligence should move, and its priorities supply a general sense of how the Community should use its resources. I believe you will find it a useful statement, and I would be happy to discuss any of its conclusions with you should you have any questions. [redacted]
